

Who Is Cue?

CUE is a non-profit, member-led community that provides the latest best practices for improving labor and employee relations.

CUE has over 100 member organizations representing a cross-section of business and industry, from small firms to Fortune 500 companies.

CUE is dedicated to assisting organizations that believe their employees deserve a workplace built around flexibility, productivity, quality of work life, fairness, and the opportunity to succeed and participate in decisions affecting one's future.

Why CUE?

Commitment

The paramount advantage of CUE membership lies in its tightly knit community. Establishing connections is as effortless as sending an email to the director and promptly receiving feedback from fellow members. Alternatively, members can post questions within the online community, spanning a wide array of topics and concerns. Once a member, there is no need to face a challenge alone, as the supportive CUE community stands ready to lend a helping hand.

Conferences

Experience our esteemed semi-annual meetings at a significant discount. By participating in these events, attendees gain access to sessions prioritizing forward-thinking and proactive human resources practices and staying updated on the latest advancements in labor and employee relations. CUE conferences also provide unmatched networking opportunities.

Collaboration

CUE members can be part of various purposeful collaborations that can enrich their professional journey and drive collective growth. These specialized cohorts provide a dynamic environment where professionals come together, including industry discussion groups, senior Mastermind groups, and regional networking events.

Access to Free Experts

CUE members have free access to legal and consulting expertise through the Labor Lawyers Advisory Committee (LLAC) and CUE Consultants Advisory Committee (CCAC). These committees are comprised of experienced labor lawyers and consultants available to advise and assist CUE members on a wide range of labor relations issues.

Webinars

Employee engagement and labor relations are routinely in flux; balancing the employer's organizational goals and the employees' ever-changing needs necessitates proactive and well-informed leadership. CUE equips leadership by providing timely updates on the latest labor and employee relations developments via ongoing educational opportunities provided to be accessible to all levels of leadership.

CUE Newsletter

CUE members enjoy the exclusive benefit of receiving our bi-weekly newsletter, which delivers an abundance of information on critical subjects such as labor law updates, strategic employee engagement practices, and other vital positive employee relations topics.
